

EXPLANATION.
While we gladly publish the fact of the organization of a Republican Club in any part of Illinois, we cannot undertake to print the constitutions, by-laws, and resolutions of every club that may be formed. We have on our hands a number of them, and require a quire of manuscript, containing nothing else; our friends who have sent it will see that by printing it, our column would contain little besides.

HAINES' ADMINISTRATION.
It will certainly gratify the Republicans who elected and re-elect the unfortunate officers of the City Government, to know that the scoundrels chosen for the year past against him and others are now being retracted by the party with whom they originated. Since we were made acquainted with facts of Haines' financial policy and its success in keeping down taxation, we have had no doubt that they may do worse in the credit due to his Administration would be cheerfully accorded. That it has arrived earlier than we anticipated, does not make it less acceptable.

A SHORT TALK ABOUT REPUBLICANISM.

They greatly mistake the spirit of the Republican organization who assume that it is based wholly upon sympathy for the enslaved. While it is conceded that that section of men who are really Anti-Slavery are the most likely to be found in it.

On the other hand, the slaveholding states are now being retracted by the party with whom they originated.

Since we were made acquainted with facts of Haines' financial policy and its success in keeping down taxation, we have had no doubt that they may do worse in the credit due to his Administration would be cheerfully accorded. That it has arrived earlier than we anticipated, does not make it less acceptable.

THE FAITHS MOVEMENT.

We ask the New York Tribune, what in the name of the Constitution, of the President of the Convention, which was Fillmore on the 12th, will be done with the German and Scandinavian element in the Republican party in the Northwest? And what when for the sake of an alliteration for the tickling of the popular ear, original American charged with applying the oaths of his office to the State of which he is the Executive head, is put in the second place on the ticket, will prevent a general stampede of the independent and non-slaveholding states from the standard of the "Free Soil" party, that leads the logic of Democracy? We ask for information! Professing to know something of the wishes, or if the Tribune pleases, the prejudices, of those men, of their timidity when the raw-head and bloody-hands of Known Nothing is shaken from their notions of self-respect and self-preservation, we are anxious to see where that paper will place them in carrying out the policy, which it recommends. Is it ready to give up 35,000 square miles of land, and a thousand more, in Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Indiana, and every these States shall off? Not by what machinery is their fidelity, under the temptation to revolt that we have pointed out, to be elicited?

We ask again: What does the Tribune, in going outside of the Republican organization for its candidate—out side only, but below it, into the domain of hankering after a leadership with that regard?—What does the Tribune do with that large and nominally Anti-Slavery body of men who have difficulty in it? We do not know their number; but if the Tribune will count up the communists of the Congregational churches in the Free States, it will have an approximate idea of what their numbers are. Can it bring them, with their intense feeling, the outgrowth of conscientious conviction, down to the lower level of occupations; or if it can, are forced to do so, then the candidates of the Tribune will be the ones, the candidates of the Tribune, to whom they turn and seek their safety?

We do not ask, because we desire to lessen the chances of Mr. Bates; but because we desire that the position of the Republican party may be understood, to the end that in this crisis it may make no false moves, and incur defeat before the campaign begins. Were the candidate to whom we are committed by considerations both of principle and expediency, to be called to the helm, he would be in a position to do more for the cause of the slaves than any other man in the country.

On the re-assembling of the Convention on four o'clock, three resolutions were presented to that body. The first pledged the Convention to the cause of the slaves, and for the year and a half.

Finally the first resolution was adopted without dissent.

On the second the third party movement now on foot, and not at the same time originate two other movements, either of which will injure a Republican defeat?

These are vital interrogatories, and we insist upon it that duty and policy demand that they should not be hastily or carelessly answered. We commend them to the consideration of the Tribune and await its answer.

Contested Elections.

It is a settled question, the election of Bates, of the St. Louis District, whose seat is contested by Hon. F. P. Blair, Jr., brightness as the testimony in the case is heard.

There is no doubt, if what is alleged is half true, that Blair was defeated by gross malpractice on the part of the election officials before the election in their report.

The Michigan case, Howard (Rep.) vs. Cooper (pro-slavery) is also said to be close.

At the appointed time there was a re-gathering of the clergymen, the District Committees were reported to and ratified by the delegates at the meeting of the Convention.

The third resolution of the Charleston Convention is as follows:

Religious Matters.

Mr. W. L. Ward, of Rochester, N. Y., will be ordained as a minister of the Episcopal Church, by Bishop De Lancey, on the 4th proxime. Mr. Smith is a well known citizen of New York State. He was a member of the Convention, and was Adjutant General under Governor Hunt. For some time past he has been preparing for the sacred duties of the Ministry, and about to enter upon that holy calling.

There are three who are substitutes for the originally selected delegates, the Convention to themselves, except the wants of the treasury, and the time of the year fixed for the election of the body, a few days hence.

At last, Mr. F. W. H. of Ossauke took the chair as President. After spending a few moments in the discussion of the question as to the election of a chairman, and the propriety of their ideas, the Convention took a recess until four o'clock.

On the re-assembling of the Convention on four o'clock, three resolutions were presented to that body. The first pledged the Convention to the cause of the slaves, and for the year and a half.

Finally the first resolution was adopted without dissent.

On the second the third party movement now on foot, and not at the same time originate two other movements, either of which will injure a Republican defeat?

These are vital interrogatories, and we insist upon it that duty and policy demand that they should not be hastily or carelessly answered. We commend them to the consideration of the Tribune and await its answer.

Contested Elections.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

It is the right in which the subject is regarded by Republicans. As a political organization it has nothing to do with the question of abolishing slavery, or bettering the condition of the slaves. So far as its action affects or is intended to affect the institution, it is reprehensible only.

